

TRAUMA EDUCATION FOR THE ENTIRE JUDICIAL WORKFORCE

Aligning What We Know with What We Do

Trauma is found in every court division—from traditional courts to specialized problem-solving courts—and court involvement can often compound its effects, contributing to repeat offenses and multigenerational system involvement. Building a trauma-responsive justice system requires education across the entire judicial workforce. This course provides practical, evidence-based strategies to help strengthen decision-making, improve collaboration, and support better long-term outcomes for individuals, families, and communities.

How Will This Course Help?

Practical application of trauma science within real-world judicial system.

Deeper understanding of trauma and resilience across court settings.

Accountability & compassion: All are motivated to timely comply, reducing recidivism while promoting healing, resiliency, and stability.

Workforce well-being: Manage vicarious trauma and prevent burnout with healthy coping strategies.

A Trauma-Responsive Approach Belongs in Every Court Division

Including:

Criminal • Civil • Family • Dependency • Juvenile • Problem-Solving
Because trauma is prevalent across jurisdictional boundaries!

Why Choose FSU's Trauma & Resilience Course?

Florida State University, a leader in trauma science

Offers this comprehensive online course to equip judicial professionals, court personnel, and key stakeholders with the latest trauma science and practical tools to support more trauma-responsive court practices.

Earn Continuing Education Credits

This course is approved for 12 CJE hours for members of the judiciary, including 2 ethics hours. Attorneys may earn 12 CLE credits, and CEUs are available for clinical social workers and mental health counselors.

If we miss the trauma, we have missed the case, in how we handle it and how we help resolve it. Every judge, attorney, and others involved in the legal system must be trauma-informed and trauma-responsive.
